Dear Nirman,

I am pleased to notify you of your acceptance to the Honors College at Texas State University. Congratulations!

The Honors College provides significant opportunities to nourish and expand your intellectual, social, and creative endeavors. As a member of our community, you will have the chance to meet new people and make lasting friendships in a supportive, academic environment. Our discussion-based courses offer you an opportunity to expand your knowledge and challenge yourself intellectually alongside other students who share your innate curiosity. More information about the Honors College and our programs can be found on our website at www.txstate.edu/honors.

Honors students also have the option to live in the Honors College living-learning community designed to encourage the development of meaningful friendships centered around a shared academic experience. Students in this community live together and interact with each other and our faculty-in-residence, Dr. Louie Valencia. New students will be contacted by Housing and Residential Life with information about choosing your community on our campus.

We look forward to welcoming you personally to the Honors College. Please visit us in Lampasas Hall 407, the Honors Coffee Forum, during your next visit to Texas State.

Sincerely,

Dr. Heather C. Galloway

Dean, Honors College

Professor, Department of Physics
